Norway Seizes Three Spy Ring Suspects

Reuters

OSLO, April 12—Security police announced today they have uncovered a spy ring operating in northern Norway.

They said the ring was suspected of working for the Soviet Union and that three persons have been arrested. Two have "partially confessed," police added.

The announcement said the espionage dated back to World War II when some Norwegians in foreign countries were educated as radio operators. It added:

"On returning home following the liberation of Norway they continued their activities.

"They have been assigned to provide and transmit information on military situations, mainly in north Norway.

"At present there are no indications that military personnel are involved."
